

style. Parbury declared when 5 wickets had fallen for 239 runs. The School had two hours batting, but their captain was too tempted to play carefully, and finally captured six of our wickets for 46 runs. Weller and Barraud made great efforts to make runs, but the whole side could only put together 67. Having half-an-hour left, we went in a second time, and did very much better, the total reaching 55 for 2 wickets at the close of play; Orr, Morris, and Weller, all reached double figures.
